Special Joint Advisory Committee (SJAC)

From 2012 to 2016, UTFA engaged in an unprecedented campaign to modernize and update the role of the Association in representing faculty and librarians at the University of Toronto. This campaign originated in a reform effort targeting the Memorandum of Agreement prescribing UTFA's current role and the limited scope collective bargaining process within that MoA.

One of the key concerns with the current MoA was that it excluded important academic policies shaping the context of the work of faculty and librarians (e.g., appointment policies) from any rigorous process of negotiation. Indeed, some issues, including the procedural aspects of academic restructuring initiatives (e.g., academic program closure, amalgamation, or relocation) were excluded from the MoA altogether.

UTFA and representatives of the Governing Council of the University of Toronto reviewed the strengths and weaknesses of the MoA and explored options for modernizing it via the Special Joint Advisory Committee (SJAC) process. The SJAC also specifically looked at the role of faculty and librarians in academic planning and restructuring initiatives, and at potential changes to appointments policies for faculty.

Letters to the Provost Concerning UTFA's Bargaining Proposals

What I miss in the draft planning document – indeed, what I have missed in the entire planning process – is any attempt to engage in the difficult question of how to realize the ideals of academic freedom in a climate of economic cutbacks. In fact, I haven't seen any indication that your administration even understands or cares what academic freedom is, or why it is so important in running a viable teaching and research institution, or why it is given such a prominent place in the university's policy documents. John Noyes, Professor of German

As the association representing many of those who make University of Toronto "one of the world's great public institutions for higher learning," we think the Administration owes UTFA a fair hearing and serious considerations of the issues. We encourage you to reconsider your position and begin to work toward establishing a new relationship with faculty and librarians for the greater good of the University of Toronto community. Katie Mazer, on behalf of CUPE 3902 Executive Committee

UTFA's proposal to negotiate all terms and conditions of employment for faculty and librarians is not as an extreme demand as the Provost would have us believe. It is rather a logical outcome of inflexible, top-down decision making processes that infuse the existing bureaucratic structures of the U of T. (Read full letter as PDF)
